Conditions in Iowa have reached the State-wide riot stage. The standpatters now flatly declare they propose to force the Cummins people defy them and say that they will pitch the other fellows bodily out of the convention hall if there is an attempt to steal the convention by such rank methods as are proposed to be employed.

The anti-Cummins campaign has been placed in charge of E. H. Hunter.

Votes in the Convention.

The Cummins people have now 724 un-The Cummins people have now 724 uncontested delegates. George D. Perkins, of Sloux City, has 350. Major W. S. Rathbun, of Marion, has 99. There are 175 uninstructed delegates most of them likely to go to Perkins. There are 125 contested, which the equities would divide about equally between Cummins and Perkins. There are seven counties yet to name their delegates, with a total of about 100. Most of these are Cummins counties, but Hunter has announced that the standpatters will contest every one, send up contesting delegates will their control of the State committee, seat their contesting delegates in the temporary organization.

If this beautiful scheme could be carried out just as Hunter had planned it, the anti-Cummins forces would have about the necessary $21 to control the convention. Granting everything that they can possibly claim or contest from this time forth, they would be able, by deciding every contest in their favor, to figure themselves into a bare majority in the temporary organization.

But in order to make up this total and faure out a control, it is necessary to assume that every Perkins delegate will stand by the plans of Manager Hunter. It happens that Perkins has three counties in his home district, the "Big Eleventh," which will not go into the deal. One of these is his home county of Woodbury, which is also the home of Congressman E. H. Hubbard, Hubbard has been loyal to Perkins, though two-thirds of his district has instructed for Cummins.

This represents the actual facts of the situation to date, and outlines the plans of both sides. The methods which the machine is employing to defeat Cummins are the most remarkable the State has ever seen. They can only be compared to the desferate means employed by the stalwarts in some of their bitter fights against La Follette in Wisconsin.

Blythe Back of the Fight.

Most of the members of the Iowa dele-gation in Washington have become fearful of the menace to the party which is involved in the railroad plan to steal the coming convention, and they will counsel against it.

The man whose political power really backs the fight on Cummins is J. W. Blythe, of Burlington, general counsel of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad. Blythe is the agent of the consolidated railroad power in Iowa politics. He opposed Cummins five years ago, but not so violently as now. Soon after Cummins was sworn in as governor the Northern Securities Company demanded some important changes in the corporation laws of Iowa, which, if they had been secured, would have made it possible to transplant the Northern Securities to Iowa and render it immune from successful prosecution. The legislature was easily managed and the law passed; but Cummins vetoed it, after a stormy scene with Blythe, who swore vengeance. swore vengeance.
